BULLENO BULLETINS

STAN'S SOAPBOX

Hi, Heroes!

Okay! Okay! You can stop with the letters and phone calls now! I haven't been fired — and, least not yet! There's a simple reason why you've seen other columns in place of the old Soapbox in our mags three out of four weeks a month. It's because we're now publishing about a hundred titles each month, and it seemed like a good idea to have different Bullpen Bulletins pages every single week, allowing various editors to wax eloquent in this space, so that those of you who buy a whole kaboodle of Marvels each month won't have to read the same yacking on every B.B. page! So, think of the fun you'll have, never knowing whose column you'll find whenever you buy a mighty Marvel mag! Of course, you can't win 'em all — sometimes you'll end up with mine.

By the way, here's a hot tip for you. There's a new paperback series published by Roc Science Fiction (a division of Penguin Publishing Co.) entitled Stan Lee's Riftworld on which I collaborated with the well-known best-selling science-fiction author Bill McKay. The first title, Crossover, should be going on sale about now. It stars the staff of a comic-book company (squad familiar?) which gets involved in an alien invasion from outside the rift between dimensions! It's wild, scary, and funny — and it must be a grabber because we've already had inquiries regarding the TV and motion picture rights! And, naturally, it's almost certain to lead to a special Marvel comicbook series in the near future!

So, if you wanna get in at the start of something new and exciting, latch onto a copy of Riftworld — Crossover. If it's not at your bookstore yet, pitch a tent in the doorway and wait for it! And, while you're waiting, remember — since mighty Marvel goes to the trouble of publishing over a hundred titles a month, the least you can do is buy as many as possible. I mean, hey, you don't want us to think you're jingoist!

Excuse!

Stan Lee

ers at Mighty Marvel, we like to celebrate Independence Day the old-fashioned way: with sparklers, firecrackers, and those little pellets that you put a match to and they turn into ashy snakes! Of course, our characters are independent enough to celebrate the fantastic fourth of July in their own style. Here's what our X-Patriots had to say.

John Romita Jr., of X-MEN fame, suggests that Marvel's everywhere spend the holiday weekend "buying extra copies of X-MEN, instead of buying dangerous explosives!"

Explosives were also on the minds of House. That's pretty patriotic." Evan Dorkin, the trainer of FIGHT-MAN, said his pugilistic creation "would spend the day fighting."

From-throwing punches we move to drinking punch, as several of our heroes have partying on their minds. FANTASTIC FOUR penciler Paul Ryan said the FF "would have an open-air barbecue on the roof of their building. The top was blown off during the Infinity War, and that's why it's an open-air barbecue!"

CAGE penciler Scott Benetti said that "Gage would invite all his friends to a 4th of July party; somebody would choke on a hot dog and die, and, just like every other murder, he'd get blamed for it, and spend the rest of the time trying to clear his name!"

FEUD creator Mike Baron said that the characters from that series would have a special kind of party. "The Skids would celebrate Independence Day by having a barbecue where they make buffalo wings out of the Kles!"

DEATHLOK scripter Greg Wright said his non-mutant cyborg "would want to have a big picnic with his family, where they would eat hot dogs and corn on the cob, that's what he would want to do, but he can't, because he can't eat food — he has to drink baby formula!"

Tom Raney, artist on the ultra-hot new WARLOCK CHRONICLES limited series, said Warlock would most likely sit this holiday out. "Judging by what he usually does," Tom said, "he would probably be sleeping!"

Finally we have AVENGERS WEST COAST penciler Dave Ross, who chose to assert his own independence. As Dave put it, "Hey, I'm Canadian! We celebrate Victoria Day on the first (of July!)" When asked why his countrymen have a day honoring Queen Victoria, Dave noted, "It's mostly just an excuse to set off fireworks!"

Sounds good to us — through we never need an excuse to set off an explosion of excitement every month in all your favorite Marvel mags!

several of our other artists. CABLE penciler Art Thibert suggested that "Cable would probably go ballistic and start a few fireworks of his own!" PUNISHER penciler Hugh Haynes said that "the Punisher would probably be watching the rockets' red glare... from his Stinger shoulder harness!"

Even funny characters will have a blast on the fourth. Mark Evanier noted that Grip would "probably shoot his foot off," while REN AND STIMPY penciler Mike Kazaleh said America's ugliest cat and dog team "would set fire to the White
